The goal of this mini-project course is to provide students a hands-on and practical experience with issues related to theoretical or applicative topics in computational vision, human perception, and/or properties of natural visual stimuli. The course includes few introductory lectures for the presentation of preliminary material, technical tutorials, and suggested class projects, and then an independent work by the students on specific projects.